Paralegal Studies

Paralegals assist attorneys in providing quality legal services to clients. They identify and manage documents critical to litigation, assist in the courtroom, perform computerized legal research, assist with mergers and acquisitions, draft wills and contracts, and interview clients and witnesses.

Career Opportunities

Paralegals are one of the faster growing occupations since they now perform many of the legal tasks once carried out by lawyers. Employment growth stems from law firms and other employers hiring paralegals to decrease the cost and increase the efficiency and availability of legal services. Employment opportunities exist in law offices, government agencies, and the legal departments of corporations, hospitals, and financial institutions.

Some graduates opt to go on to a four-year college or university and then on to law school. Health care professionals can use the paralegal program to transition to a specialized area such as legal nurse consultant.

The Lakeland Advantage

- Lakeland's paralegal program is approved by the American Bar Association.
- Students fulfill the educational requirements to become Ohio State Bar Association Certified Paralegals.
- The program has an excellent reputation with lawyers throughout the community.
- The college has a law library on campus.
- Cooperative work experience is provided in a legal setting.

Lakeland's Program

The paralegal studies program is designed to provide students with the core of legal knowledge and skills needed to assist and support lawyers in the practice of law.* Upon completion of the program, graduates should be able to enter the legal profession as a paralegal, prepare legal documents, perform legal research, apply principles of legal ethics, work as a member of a legal team, and engage in lifelong learning.

All paralegal courses have a practical component, allowing students to put into practice the legal knowledge they gained in the classroom. The paralegal program concludes with a cooperative work experience in a legal setting to offer students first-hand experience in the field.

Lakeland's paralegal program is approved by the American Bar Association and fulfills the educational requirement to become an Ohio State Bar Association Certified Paralegal.
